WHY STUDY HISTORY?
If you really want to get a handle on the modern world, it is essential to understand the past. How did America become a superpower? Would women have got the right to vote without struggle? Why do people empower authoritarian leaders? How does climate shape society? History at Stirling allows you to explore these and many other pressing questions, guided by a committed team of historians passionate about their subjects. You will develop your knowledge of the world while acquiring intellectual and personal skills much in demand in the labour market.

COURSE DETAILS
Stirling is different: in the context of a friendly environment with approachable staff, we offer a unique breadth and chronological depth of options at honours level. We offer a range of modules on American, African, European, British and Scottish history that only few other (and much larger) institutions can match. You will explore reform and revolution, war, ideas, social movements, historical figures, race, gender, religion, democracy, the environment. In addition, thanks to the flexibility of Stirling’s academic courses, you can study history in combination with other subjects, such as education, politics, languages, media studies and many more.

The first two years provide the strong foundations that any student of history needs, while years three and four allow you to choose from an ample selection of country and thematic specialisms. The final year allows you to become a researcher yourself and thereby practice the skills you have learned and hone your analytical and problem-solving skills for life beyond university. You will have the opportunity to do one Special Subject, working closely with our staff, leading experts in their fields, in small groups, hands on cutting-edge historical research themes, using real primary sources. This level of in-depth study runs in parallel to the final year dissertation, a personal project in which you show that you have mastered the knowledge, the skills and the autonomy of the well-rounded university graduate.
CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

A dedicated module in the fourth semester will orient you towards the variety of professional careers a degree in history can offer.

A History degree has always been valued by employers because of the intellectual challenges it offers and the particular skills it fosters. These include a capacity for independent work and effective time management, an ability to deal with complex information and to organise and solve problems, and a capacity to communicate clearly in writing and in speech, arguing a persuasive case. History graduates from Stirling, therefore, have been successful in obtaining a wide variety of posts, some in history-related areas such as teaching and work in museums and libraries; others in fields such as the civil service, administration, commerce, banking and insurance.

The University of Stirling is 3rd in the Scotland and top-20 in the UK for graduate employability with almost 97% of our graduates in employment or further study within six months of graduating (HESA 2017).

WHY CHOOSE STIRLING?

You will be taught by someone who is internationally respected in their field. Our staff, moreover, are committed to delivering the best learning experience. Many of our staff are Fellows of the Higher Education Academy and are regularly recognised at the RATE awards, Stirling’s student-nominated teaching prizes.

Studying at Stirling, in addition, is an international experience: History has agreements with numerous universities in Europe, the US, Canada and Australia, so you have the opportunity to make friends from many countries and to enrich your learning experience by doing one semester abroad.

Finally, take a look around our campus, one of the most beautiful places to study in the UK, if not the world. Our sport facilities are first class and our students soon learn to make the most of our active, healthy and supportive environment.

“I really appreciated the flexibility at the beginning of the course that gave me time to consider what I wanted to specialise in. My modules were taught to a very high standard but I particularly enjoyed studying Comparative Politics, Political Communications, America in the 19th Century and Europe: From World War to Cold War. I also really appreciated the ‘my door is always open’ style support I received whilst writing my Dissertation.”
