COURSE DETAILS

In the Stirling Law School, we provide high quality professionally qualifying legal education through our Scots Law LLB degrees. The LLB is available as an undergraduate four-year Honours degree and as a two-year accelerated degree for graduates in other disciplines.

We also offer a wide range of innovative and popular multi-disciplinary BA Honours Law degrees for those from throughout the UK and abroad who want a challenging and rewarding university education in law, but who do not intend entering the legal profession in Scotland.

Students on both the LLB and BA degrees study a wide range of interesting and relevant specialist law subjects, which examine the inter-relationship between law and society in key areas such as human rights; government; business, trade, banking and finance; the environment and energy; sport; and information technology.

The Law School's LLB degrees are professionally accredited by the Law Society of Scotland and the Faculty of Advocates, and provide the foundation stage of qualifying as a lawyer in Scotland. The employability of all of our graduates, whether on the LLB or the BA, is a priority for us. Throughout our degrees, important legal, communication, organisational and personal skills are developed to enhance employability after graduation. We offer a work placement course and extensive guidance on securing graduate level employment and career development. Law students also have the opportunity to study abroad in Europe, Australia and the US.

LLB: Accredited by The Law Society of Scotland and the Faculty of Advocates.
